

Mark as Favourite

When you mark Talk inline comments and suggestions as favourites, you can:

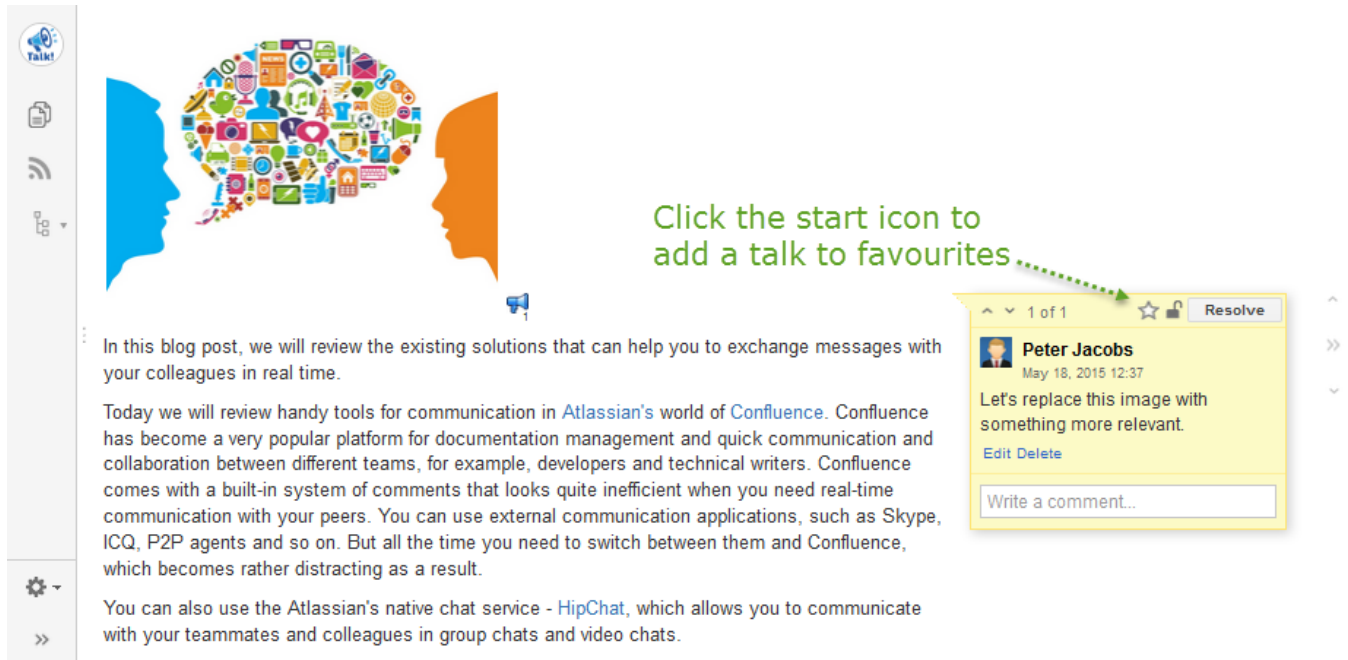

- see them at a glance on pages with numerous discussions and suggestions
- view and manage favourite talks from all spaces on one page

It's very convenient in such cases:

- there are ongoing discussions you want to keep track of
- you need to remember to answer some discussions and suggestions
- a discussion is almost over and a talk will soon be resolved, but it contains the information you will need to consult later on, so you want to keep this talk at hand after it's resolved, and more

Adding to favourites

To add a discussion or suggestion to Favourite Talks, click  in its top right corner:

The screenshot shows a Confluence page with a 'Talk' sidebar on the left. The main content area contains a comment by Peter Jacobs from May 18, 2015. The comment text reads: "In this blog post, we will review the existing solutions that can help you to exchange messages with your colleagues in real time. Today we will review handy tools for communication in Atlassian's world of Confluence. Confluence has become a very popular platform for documentation management and quick communication and collaboration between different teams, for example, developers and technical writers. Confluence comes with a built-in system of comments that looks quite inefficient when you need real-time communication with your peers. You can use external communication applications, such as Skype, ICQ, P2P agents and so on. But all the time you need to switch between them and Confluence, which becomes rather distracting as a result. You can also use the Atlassian's native chat service - HipChat, which allows you to communicate with your teammates and colleagues in group chats and video chats." The comment's top right corner features a star icon, a lock icon, and a 'Resolve' button. A green arrow points from the text "Click the start icon to add a talk to favourites" to the star icon.

Removing from favourites

The star icon will change to , which means the talk was marked as favourite. You can click the star again to remove the talk from Favourite Talks:

To view a talk on a Confluence page, click the link next to the Talk icon. Clicking ★ in the list of favourite talks removes them from favourites.

Besides browsing, you can edit, delete, reply to, resolve, archive talks, restore resolved and archived talks, manage viewing permissions right on the Favourite Talks page.

Using the toggle button above the list of favourite talks, you can sort favourite talks by:

- Talk updated (the date of Talk discussion update)
- Marked as favourite (the date when a Talk discussion was marked as favourite)
- Page title (the title of the page on which a Talk discussion id located)
